

Durable Orders Disappoint

Weak release today for durable goods orders in May (April revised downward as well). This was released right after data started to finally look a bit healthier for the US economy, which highlights the world we live in with continued sluggish growth.

